Dr. Carolyn Langston

Carolyn Langston is almost as much a part of South Arkansas Community College as its literal foundation.

She was the first hire of Southern Arkansas University-El Dorado when it began in 1975 and continues today as a veteran of the SouthArk business faculty, teaching courses like accounting to generations of eager minds.

A graduate of Junction City High School, of Southern Arkansas University in Magnolia with a bachelor's degree in business education and of Louisiana Tech University in Ruston, La., with both master's and doctor's degrees in accounting, Langston taught at the secondary level at El Dorado and Parkers Chapel High Schools before joining the ranks of college instructors. She also has maintained a certification as a public accountant for 35 years.
